7: Assistance for the underachiever

Main ideas
- Children may fall behind the required level for a variety of reasons, including social, emotional and physical
- Children in this category are termed children with ‘additional needs’.
- Dyslexia is a term given to those who are not achieving the required level in literacy.
- Teachers need to provide special assistance for those with ‘additional needs’.

Outcomes
On completion of this session teachers will:
- be aware of the practical steps they can take in assisting children with additional needs
- be able to involve the home and school community in providing assistance
- understand that God can bring about great changes

How do we help children who are underachieving?

Discussion

Read ‘a teacher’s testimonial’ on the Beacon Media website: www.beaconmedia.com.au - Teaching and Administration tools
(Also in recorded the appendix)

What are some of the causes of failure to thrive in the classroom in the area of literacy?
What can teachers do?
How can we use our Christian faith to encourage these children?

Tips for helping the underachiever:
1. Within the classroom:
   - give work at their level; break down or simplify the tasks; make sure that written material is at their reading level
   - Group work – use mentors / student support.
   - Parents or assistants to sit by them and offer assistance – but not to DO the work for them

2. Out of the classroom
• withdraw for 20 minutes at a time for one-on-one work. Parents or assistants can follow a set program / routine. (See example - Bridges)
• withdraw a small group of same ability level, if there is an extra teacher available, or a pre-service teacher.

3. Homework
Guide parents in how they can help at home –
• Not harsh or condemning but always encouraging
• Reading together; reading to the child
• writing stories and letters together

One-on-one assistance sessions for lower primary
Parents or assistants can be given a set routine for working with students one-on-one. A session should be for half an hour per day, for 3 or more days per week.

Session content:
Vocabulary – 5 minutes
Child reads 5 and 10 high frequency words on cards.
Each time the word is said correctly, the helper places a tick on the back of the card.
When there are 5 ticks on the back, then word is replaced.

Familiar Reading – 5 minutes
The child reads aloud a familiar short story or rhyme at the independent level. The aim is for fluency and enjoyment.

Reading Together – 5 minutes
This is a book at instructional level. It should be read by child to the assistant but if the child is finding difficulty, then assistant may read with the child. It is not necessary to read the whole book – just a few pages. Use sticky notes to mark the place.

Writing a response – 5 minutes
This is an opportunity for the child to enjoy a story read by an adult. The story must be short. Instead, you could use a picture for discussion. “Hats” will encourage discussion after the story. Teacher chooses one question only from the following:

Red (Emotions) - How did you feel when…? or How do you think X felt when…
Blue (Thinking) - What did you learn from…? What would you like to know about?
Green (Creativity) - What else could have been done? What would you have done?
White (Information) - What was …? Who was…? How many? Where?
Yellow (Good Points) - What is something good that happened? What was fun?
Black (Bad Points) - What was wrong with? What went wrong? What could have gone wrong if?
Gold – What would Jesus have done?
*Now the child writes in a sentence the answer to the question that the reading helper has asked. The reading helper and the child have a pen each and they both work together in writing the sentence. The child fills in the letters or words that he knows. The reading helper writes the rest. The sentences the child has written can be kept in a folder for future reading.

Game – 5 minutes
Word Bingo
Tic Tac Toe
Flashcard game - jump on …
Boggle - Make words from cut up letters - who can make the most in 1 minute?
Scrabble
Board game
Sentence maker - Make sentences from cut up words -Who can use the most words in sentences in 1 minute?
Cut-up sentences
I spy
spinning wheel
word shapes
word stairs
snap
concentration

Preparation for one-on-one assistance sessions
Each child must have their own names plastic document wallet. The teacher supplies the following:
1. a set of 5 high frequency words in an envelope
2. a well known reading book or rhyme.
3. a reading book at the instructional level
4. a set of coloured cardboard ‘thinking hats’ (2D)

Ideas for small group assistance
Phonics
Follow up the phonics group being taught in class, e.g. ‘ay’ words – day, pray etc.
Use games and rhymes.
Have the rhyme printed and read it together. Ask the children to highlight the words on the rhyme with that particular phonetic family.
e.g. Twinkle twinkle little star, how I wonder what you are.

Reading fluency
Use flashcard sentences for ‘speed reading’.

Picture chats
Thinking hats
Story sequencing
Big Books
Action rhymes and activities for crossing the midline (see appendix)
Writing a story together

Assessment
Make a study of the beacon media articles on additional needs.
See www.beaconmedia.com.au - Teaching and administration tools.
Write a 500 word summary on the types of three additional needs, some of the causes if known, and some of the ways of helping these children in the classroom.

A Teacher’s testimonial
by Margaret McIntyre
Terry was in the last year of primary school. Like most children of that age he was "a big fish in a little pond", and acted up quite a lot. He was obviously capable of a good academic standard, but he seldom made the effort to achieve it. During the first few months of that year we had a number of confrontations, which result in Terry's father being called to the school. We explained to him what was going on and encouraged him to actively support us in trying to get Terry to settle down and do the standard of work he was capable of. But even after several sessions with his father there was little change in Terry's attitude.

The root of the problem, we eventually learned, was that Terry's grandfather had been a hard disciplinarian, and his father had determined, "I'm not going to treat my kids the way I was treated." As a result he had gone to the opposite extreme and virtually opted out of the responsibility of training his children, leaving it all to his wife.

The day came when we felt we must come to grips with the situation, so we arranged a meeting of parents, Terry and myself. After we had discussed the problem in general terms, it came to mind to ask Terry, "Have you ever asked Jesus to come into your life?"
"Yes, I did when I was little."

His parents affirmed this, but it was clear that he needed to make a more mature commitment. Terry expressed his willingness to open his life to Jesus. Then God reminded me, "It's the father's duty and privilege to lead his son in this. Encourage him to do it."

Terry's father ministered to him beautifully, asking forgiveness for neglecting to discipline him when he needed it, and praying with him in a new commitment to living for God. From that time on there was a complete transformation in his attitude and behaviour and Terry completed his final year of primary school with a very good report, achieving a high standard in both academic studies and general attitudes. The following year Terry went on to a state high school. His parents came to see me one day with a problem, "Terry is doing really well in high school in every subject except English. We don't understand why this should be. Would you please pray with us about this?"

Once again Terry, his parents and I met together to pray, asking God to show us where Terry's problem lay. As we prayed the understanding came: English is all about communication. Because Terry's father had not communicated with him through his earlier years, Terry had difficulty with the subject of communication, English. There had been a good degree of healing the previous year after Terry recommitted his life to God, but there was need of further healing now.

Once again his father asked forgiveness, both of God and of Terry, for his negative attitudes which were initiated by a lack of relationship with his son. Then we prayed that God would heal the communication channels between Terry and his father and others, and that his ability in English at school would also improve.

The following week Terry's class sat an English test. When the results came out, much to his joy and amazement, Terry had gained the highest marks in the class. He had no further difficulties with English. The ability had been there all along, but it had been necessary for God to clear the emotional and spiritual block that affected his ability to communicate before Terry could achieve his full potential at school.

POINTS TO PONDER
Are there changes I could make in my approach to teaching that would make 'knowing God' the primary aim of every lesson? Can I do more to involve parents in the training of their children, keeping in mind that it is God's plan that fathers should train their children? Eph. 6:4 How important are emotional issues to the learning process?
